

Media release:

11th May 2004

How many good reasons are there for NOT doing a business plan?

If you know people who are reluctant to commit their business ideas to paper, you might want to point them towards the free pdf of a new booklet now available online. It is called "39 good excuses for not writing a business plan....and a few good reasons why you should". It is the perfect tonic for jaded business advisers – and their clients.

Author and business researcher Dr Brian Dear claims that: "We've heard some really innovative reasons for doing nothing in our time. Finding excuses for not writing a business plan seems to bring out the creative side of entrepreneurs!"

His co-author, business adviser Peter Morgan, said: "Our booklet could be just the resource business advisers need to persuade entrepreneurs to put their ideas on paper."

As well as taking a lighter-hearted look at the excuses people use to avoid writing a business plan, the booklet offers a handy guide to checking that a business plan covers all the relevant information.

It is available in pdf format from www.cut-edge.co.uk (click on "Latest news and documents".)

end.

Notes: Cutting Edge helps businesses and public sector organisations to identify, understand, win over and retain the customers, stakeholders and communities with whom they want to do business.

Peter Morgan is a marketing communications specialist, a SFEDI-accredited business adviser and a member of the Institute of Business Advisers.

Dr Brian Dear is a researcher specialising in management and small business development.

Contact names: Brian Dear / Peter Morgan

Company: Cutting Edge (UK) Limited

Address: Admiral House, 1 Cardinal Way, Harrow HA3 5TE

Tel: 020 8515 2688 Mobile: 07867 804817 / 07774 12 66 52

Email: brian@cut-edge.co.uk / pete@cut-edge.co.uk

Web: www.cut-edge.co.uk Fax: 020 8515 2685